

FREE TELESEMINAR

Thursday, December 15, 2011, 5 pm CET, 11 am EST

On The Two IDM Coaching Programs, with an Emphasis on Participants with English as a Second Language

In this teleseminar, Otto will explain the two different programs he has developed for coaches to learn:

1. to understand at a deeper level how clients make meaning of their experiences in life and at work different from others, and to coach them in harmony with coaches' assessment-based understanding of them (Module A);
2. to think in coaching with greater fluidity, or "dialectically", able to describe, by way of assessment, how clients presently think in ways other than those of formal logical thinking (Module B);
3. to gain insight into psychological problems of coaching clients based on a psychological assessment, and give feedback to them about assessed findings (Module C).
4. to pull together insights from Modules A, B, and/or C in a case study on a single client by using yourself as an instrument of qualitative research.

See the testimonials at <http://www.interdevelopmentals.org/testimonials.php>

Otto will take questions and comments about what might best suit you in a particular phase of your coaching career.

About IDM and Otto Laske

The Interdevelopmental Institute (IDM) has a decade long experience in internet-based distance classes teaching participants from Europe, South America, and Asia-Pacific the basics of evidence based developmental coaching in both its social-emotional and cognitive forms. Otto Laske, also a non-native speaker of English, has become an expert in understanding many varieties of English the world over. He is known for speaking slowly and reflectively, and being an outstanding listener to all varieties of English.

In order to register, go to <http://interdevelopmentals.org/resources-teleseminars-free.php>